Sanders wins New Hampshire

Buttigieg finishes a close second, Klobuchar a strong third; Biden, Warren end further back

MANCHESTER, N.H. » Bernie Sanders won New Hampshire's presidential primary election Tuesday night, narrowly edging moderate rival Pete Buttigieg and scoring the first clear victory in the Democratic Party's chaotic 2020 nomination fight.

In his win, the 78-year-old Sanders, a self-described democratic socialist, beat back a strong challenge from the 38-year-old former Midwestern mayor, two men representing different generations and wings of their party. "This victory here is the beginning of the end for Donald Trump," Sanders declared.

As Sanders and Buttigieg celebrated, an unexpectedly strong performance from Amy Klobuchar gave her a path out of New Hampshire as the contest moves on to the string of state-by-state primary contests that lie ahead.

Fourteen days after leaving the area of China where novel coronavirus was quickly spreading, 195 Americans who had been quarantined at March Air Reserve Base near Riverside are now free to go home.

They celebrated the moment Tuesday morning by tossing their face masks like graduates at a commencement ceremony. Then most of the group, who health officials say carry zero risk of spreading the disease, got on buses that took them to commercial flights at Ontario International Airport or Los Angeles International Airport.

"They don't need additional tests, they don't need to be shunned, they don't have novel coronavirus."

A handful will spend another day voluntarily at the base where they had been confined, waiting for flights that leave today, said Riverside County health spokesman Jose Arballo Jr.

The top-ranked State Department official for the Wuhan region, Consul General Jamie Fouss, stayed behind an extra hour to describe what it was like being confined to the base in the first U.S. quarantine since 1963.

"Everyone felt like the quarantine was their civic duty," Fouss said, his voice showing his emotion in a news conference Tuesday.

Fouss thanked health officials,

Five westside homicides connected, police say

Four attacks between August and January on San Bernardino's westside that resulted in five deaths and two injuries are believed to be connected and gang-related, police said Tuesday.

Some of the victims, including middle school teacher Nancy Magana, 25, were believed to be randomly chosen. Others were "possibly" known to their attackers, San Bernardino police said.

The common thread was that the slayings happened west of the 215 Freeway, an area of high gang activity.

The weapons used were handguns and high-powered rifles.

"There are people out there that saw these homicides, saw these shootings, that saw what happened, and we need those folks to come forward," interim Police Chief Eric McBride said at a news conference at police headquarters.

Police showed surveillance videos that they hope will jog witnesses' memories.

Magana, a new Del Vallejo Middle School teacher, was sitting
